

Kristine Tuinstra

Kristine recently started a new position with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. She says, "It's been a great fit so far."

She works with the Political Affairs and Federation Relations division of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce which incorporates our political programs, grassroots and advocacy shop and our work with state and local Chambers and Associations.

As part of the Chamber's legislative and political action center, Kristine manages the Washington Fly-In Policy Briefings program which brings together policy experts and business leaders to receive in depth information on important legislative issues, and provide the resources to aggressively advocate for free enterprise before Congress, the White House, and regulatory agencies.

Prior to joining the U.S. Chamber, she completed a fellowship through the Koch Associate Program where she studied economics and non-profit management while working as a policy analyst on economic issues for a DC-based organization.

Kristine is a 2008 graduate of Calvin where she studied Political Science and International Relations.
