United States Marine Corps	http://www.marineofficer.com	The United States Marine Corps is looking for the most qualified and motivated individuals to become future leaders of Marines as Officers. These individuals will become either Ground Officers, Pilots or Lawyers, but must first attend Officer Candidate School (OCS). Both undergrads and graduates can be selected to attend OCS for either two six-week increments or one ten-week course during the Summer so it will not interfere with the academic school year. Additionally, this course provides both internship and college credits and it is fully paid. Upon graduation from OCS students return home to continue with their academic program and after graduation from an accredited college or institution they will be offered a commission as a Marine Officer at the rank of Second Lieutenant.
