This activity centers on identifying the people involved with Petra, life in Petra, description of the setting, and the sequencing of events that led to the decline of Petra. This activity allows those students who have a bend toward Gardner’s musical intelligence to produce a rap or a song that sufficiently tells the story of Petra through a medium that allows learning to last.
Materials:

- At least one keyboard (even a $19.99 one will be adequate.)
- Paper and pencils
- Optional: a microphone (adds to the enjoyment)

Procedure:

After becoming familiar with the many aspects of Petra, students would be encouraged to write a verse with the knowledge they have learned. These verses could be set to one of the many musical options of the keyboard or set to rap. Students could do this activity on their own or work with a partner or a small group (of no more than five). Students will sign up for the keyboard after their verse is complete. Keyboard use could be at break, lunch, library, study hall, or at teacher-assigned times. Putting their words to music can be done in a surprisingly short period of time, considering all the selections a keyboard has to offer. As these musical scores are completed, they should be shared with the class to enhance learning. Some tunes and raps will catch on, and your students will be singing or rapping about Petra years from now.
